

Write off a death

THREE in ten Irish adults don't know how their family would get by financially if they died.

A survey by insurance firm Royal London shows 16 per cent of participants would live off of the family breadwinner's pension if they died.

Some 19 per cent said they'd get by on the deceased person's life cover. But 29 per cent said they don't know how they'd survive.

